◀ SUMMARY

This lesson requires students to engage with the state of Christian political organizations in Canada. Students learn about the different types of Christian political organizations and choose one to do a presentation on. After this, the class determines the most important effort by a Canadian Christian political organization.

CHRISTIAN POLITICAL ORGANIZATIONS

OVERVIEW

Political action is no easy thing. While the political action of individual Christians can be effective, politics is a team sport.

There are many different Christian organizations that are dedicated to political advocacy. Each organization has different goals, different policies they prioritize, different means of achieving their goals, or different backgrounds. This creates a rich tapestry of Christian political organizations that aid one another in their effort for Canadian governments to recognize the lordship of Christ.

Some organizations are political parties. Others are think tanks that focus on developing public policy. Others specialize in grassroots mobilization, general Christian advocacy, issuebased advocacy, or even putting out media content.

The variety and number of organizations can be confusing. Which organizations deserve our support, time, and money?

You may already be familiar with many Christian political organizations. (The fact that you're using an ARPA lesson plan is a testament to that fact!) Yet new organizations pop up, change their name, or wither away from time to time. This is an opportunity for students to become aware of the different types of Christian political organizations, how they operate, and what kinds of work they are currently doing.

ESSENTIAL QUESTION

What are the most important contributions to Canadian society by Canadian Christian political organizations?

This question is intended to get the students thinking about how Christians have been successful in bringing their biblical perspective to public view. Through thinking about this question, students will see what work has been accomplished in this area by various groups.

EXPLAIN

Distribute Handout 1 - Christian Political Organizations to students and read the introduction together.

EXPLORE AN EXAMPLE

Distribute Handout 2 - Comparing Types Organizer. This organizer is intended to be printed on legal-size paper (8.5" x 14"). Lead the class in completing the first row of the table (Political Parties).

Consider:

- What are the goals of the organization?
- Who are they trying to influence to achieve their goals?
- What kinds of issues does this organization engage on?
- What undermines or threatens the work of this organization?
- Is the organization generally reactive or proactive?
- What types of activities does this organization normally engage in?
- Does this organization try to influence decisions directly or indirectly?
- Is this organization highly organized or loosely organized?

Students complete the remainder of the Handout 2 organizer through independent reading of Handout 1.

EVALUATE EFFECTIVENESS

Distribute Handout 3 - Organization Profile Practice. Students should initially complete this independently. The goal is to see which organizations have been effective, and what was effective.

Organize students into small groups of 2-4 so that they can discuss their responses to each of the scenarios presented. Some answers are proposed but the real value lies in students discussing each of these scenarios together.

Proposed answers for the scenarios in order:

- Political party
- Think tank
- Grassroots mobilization
- Issue-based advocate or general Christian advocacy group
- Issue-based advocate or general Christian advocacy group
- Grassroots mobilization
- Issue-based advocate or general Christian advocacy group
- Issue-based advocate or general Christian advocacy group or think tank
- General Christian advocacy group

ELABORATE

Students choose an organization from the list or propose one that is not listed. All the organizations listed below are Christian organizations, though they span the political spectrum.

- The task is summarized in detail on Handout 4 - Profile of a Christian Political Organization. It includes three main parts:
- Summarize the basics of the organization, including any ongoing efforts (Part A)
- An in-depth analytical look at the most significant effort of this organization (Part B). Part B should be completed using a telephone or email interview with someone at the organization. Teacher discretion is necessary here on preparing students with adequate questioning, conversation, and email etiquette skills to complete this part of the task. Specific questions are more likely to get a response than a generic “can you tell me about your organization” question.
- Critique whether the Christian organization is faithful to scripture (Part C). Take some time to describe how not all Christian organizations or churches are faithful to scripture (e.g. the United Church of Canada’s acceptance of LGBTQ2S+ identities)

You could post the finished assignments on the classroom walls to serve as a reminder and encouragement of the number of worthy Christian political efforts that are on-going.

Some examples of organizations that could be used for this assignment. (Note: not all are political advocates.)

EXPLORE RECENT ACHIEVEMENTS

Hold a class discussion to determine the three most significant political accomplishments by Christian organizations in Canada in recent years. Curate these from the ones proposed in each person's finished assignment. Acknowledge God's providence in providing for men and women to lead these efforts.

A WELCOMED ALLY

Mark Penninga | March 31, 2008 | arpacanada.ca/news/2008/03/31/a-welcomed-ally/

Christians care about what is going on in politics because our civil governments make decisions which impact almost every aspect of our lives. The Bible also calls us to be a voice for justice and righteousness. In a country where abortion is pervasive, child exploitation (through pornography, etc.) is rampant, and many women are trafficked for sexual slavery, Christians need to speak up and promote justice and love.

Organizing political action usually increases its effectiveness. A number of Christian political organizations exist in Canada. Each has their own unique approach and niche in the political landscape. It is helpful to know which organizations exist so that we can benefit from the work that is already being done.

Politics impacts everything we do, from what kinds of light bulbs we can buy to what we read on our cereal boxes. Given the impact politics has on our daily lives, it's worth asking how much Christians are doing to positively influence society through politics. Which Christian organizations are already involved in Canadian politics? How successful are they?

POLITICAL PARTIES

The Christian Heritage Party is the only Christian party in Canada. It attempts to promote the Christian worldview directly through democracy. Like all parties, Christian parties aim to be elected into public office. The electoral system in Canada has resulted in the CHP never having a candidate elected into office.

Pros: If they are successful (which is the case in the Netherlands and other countries), they can have a great deal of influence because they are part of the law-making process.

Cons: However, if they don't get elected, they have difficulty making a significant contribution apart from presenting a Christian perspective around election time.

THINK TANKS

Think tanks are academic organizations that develop research and studies with the goal of getting this into the hands of policy makers. They focus their research on topics that are in keeping with their organizational goals and priorities. Their hope is that government leaders will use their research in creating laws and policies. This is a form of indirect influence.

Pros: Politicians look to think tanks which they know share their ideology on a particular issue. They benefit with research to support their position. The think tank benefits by having its ideas influence new laws.

Cons: Think tanks also have weaknesses. Their attempt to be academic and professional creates a distance between them and the general public. As a result, they do little to help everyday Christians make a difference in the public square. They are also quite limited in what they can say, given their desire to appear objective and academic.

GRASSROOTS MOBILIZATION

Have you ever received an email from a group calling you to respond to something that is going on in Parliament, such as the definition of marriage, or a bill to increase the age of consent? Chances are the email came from an organization that is promoting grassroots mobilization. The two main organizations in Canada that are doing this are the Canada Family Action Coalition (now just Canada Family Action) and My Canada (now 4 My Canada). Like almost all Christian political organizations, these are actually very small organizations with only one or two employees. They rely on regular Canadians to get their message out to our civil governments. The primary method of action that these groups use is the Internet – through email “action notices” or “1 click technology” that allows individuals to send an email to many government officials at the click of their mouse.

Pros: Grassroots mobilization is very important because it is in keeping with the Biblical mandate for all Christians to be a light in our world. The work is not left up to a few professional lobbyists in Ottawa. Furthermore, since we live in a democracy, the people still have an important influence in the public policy process. Giving citizens a voice is an important part of promoting democracy.

Cons: Grassroots mobilization organizations are often reactive rather than proactive. Emails flood Parliament when something bad is happening, but little is being done to promote positive action before changes are already happening. Furthermore, internet-based lobbying only has limited value. Few things are more effective than meeting with a government official face to face, or at least giving them a phone call.

ISSUE-BASED ADVOCATES

Recognizing that Canada is promoting many harmful things, such as abortion and the breakdown of the family, some groups exist to make a difference on those specific issues. Campaign Life Coalition is a primarily Catholic organization that has been promoting the pro-life cause in Parliament. Groups like this have also sprung up in response to the changing definition of marriage (such as Defend Marriage Canada) but they have died out about as quickly as they came up. Many Reformed Christians are also familiar with the ECP Centre (Equipping Christians for the Public Square) which is now defunct. Although their name suggests that they may belong in the first category of Christian political groups, they have instead focussed primarily on defending civil liberties.

Pros: These organizations focus on one (or a few) issues which means that they are often good at what they do. They can also strategize and be proactive so that they influence the government officials before they make decisions. Furthermore, they are often able to interact more directly with Members of Parliament and hopefully also build a relationship with them.

Cons: This approach does not usually encourage much action from everyday people because it is just a few paid employees who do all the work. Some of these groups struggle with having to give the same message for many years and end up becoming distracted from their goal or wearing out their welcome.

GENERAL CHRISTIAN ADVOCACY GROUPS

Religious groups and denominations realize that government decisions have a big impact on the things that they care deeply about. That explains why organizations such as the Catholic Civil Rights League and the Evangelical Fellowship of Canada have offices devoted to political action. These organizations work with a broad variety of issues and try to provide a religious perspective to government.

Pros: These organizations don't try to hide the fact that they are bringing a religious perspective. This results in a more Biblically-based approach. Furthermore, they have a stronger connection to their support-base and are therefore able to encourage grassroots mobilization as well. The EFC in Ottawa is a good example of how effective this type of organization can be. They have nurtured good relationships with MPs and earned a lot of respect for the work they do.

Cons: Having a broad mandate can often result in a lack of focus. These groups struggle with having to cover such a wide variety of issues and still be effective.

ORGANIZATION PROFILE PRACTICE

INSTRUCTIONS

- Read each of the scenarios presented below.
- Compare the scenario with the information presented in Handout 1 – Canadian Christian Political Organizations.
- Beside each scenario, indicate which organization would be best suited to address the problem or situation. There could be more than one answer, but indicate which you think is best.
- Possible organizations are: Political Party, Think Tank, Grassroots Mobilization, Issue-Based Advocacy, or General Christian Political Advocacy

SCENARIO

YOUR CHOICE OF ORGANIZATION AND REASON WHY

You have just turned 18 and realize there is a federal or provincial election coming up soon. You aren't familiar with any of the candidates. Which group could you go to for thoughts on who to vote for?

Your high school civics class final report has been assigned. You think the topic of faith and families would be an interesting one. Who do you go to for some research to help you write this paper?

You'd like to write a letter to your local representative reminding them that you appreciate their hard work while bringing to their attention several issues that are important to you.

SCENARIOYOUR CHOICE OF ORGANIZATION AND REASON WHY

You are concerned about the rights of Christians to publicly practice law and medicine in a way that agrees with their religion. Which group can you go to for more information?

You want to become a doctor or a nurse, but you know that medical professionals often have to participate in procedures that violate their conscience (e.g. abortion, euthanasia, or sex-change surgeries). You would like to find out more about how your freedom of conscience would be protected if you decided to enter that field of study.

You are trying to organize a petition asking your local public libraries to install an internet filter to prevent young people from coming across inappropriate content. Who do you go to for help?

There are approximately 30,000 Canadian children in the Canadian child welfare system. As a Christian, you know the importance of the family unit to society. You would like to learn more about why there is no central information database on the number of Canadian children in government care and awaiting adoption.

Your local city government is contemplating whether to fly a rainbow flag or paint a rainbow crosswalk as a mark of support for LGBTQ2S+ identities. Who do you go to for help in writing a letter to your local mayor and city counsellors?

CHRISTIAN POLITICAL ORGANIZATION REVIEW

INSTRUCTIONS

Your task is to choose an organization from the list and to provide a short presentation to your classmates. Your teacher will provide you with a sample list of organizations that can be chosen. Alternatively, you may propose one that has not been listed to your teacher.

Part A can likely be done with some internet research or primary and secondary source reading. Part B requires a telephone conversation with someone at the organization, or at minimum an interview conducted by email.

A. Provide an essential summary of the organization including:

- a. The organization's name and its classification of one of the five types covered in this lesson.
- b. The organization's mission and vision, with some clarifying discussion.
- c. A brief summary and a few examples of various issues that this organization engages with.
- d. Provide a summary (with examples) of current efforts of this organization.

B. Provide an analytical review of the organization's efforts including:

- a. A list of the organizational successes in the past, including reasons why they were successful.

Consider including:

- i. Clear statement of the issues and efforts. Who were the different stakeholder groups involved? What were the competing interests?
- ii. Were any other solutions attempted to solve the issue previously? If so, what were the outcomes of these attempted solutions? Did any of them help to partially address the issue?
- b. Choose an effort by this organization that you think of as being their most significant. Significance will be judged based on the following criteria:
 - i. Notice: was the effort noticed as being important at the time? If so, by whom?
 - ii. Breadth: how widely was Canadian society affected at the time? Men, women, children? Provinces or country-wide? All income levels? All job profiles?
 - iii. Depth: how deeply did it affect the different groups it impacted? Was it multi-generational? Did it impact economic life, political life, communities, national life?
 - iv. Length: how long-lasting were the effects of this effort? Was it for a week? A month? Years? A generation?
 - v. Look back: how is the effort remembered today?

- C. Critique whether this Christian organization has a faithful and accurate interpretation of scripture in its work.
- a. Many individual Christians and many Christian organizations base their beliefs on the Bible, but just because they base their beliefs on the Bible does not necessarily mean that they are interpreting the Bible correctly. Consider the following questions:
 - i. Does the organization cite scripture often or are their Christian beliefs only in the background of their work?
 - ii. Does the organization's Christian beliefs align with your beliefs and the beliefs of your church?
- D. Present your information to the class.
